ST HELEN'S HALL

ADDRESS OF BISHOP MORRIS TO THE PUPILS OF ST HELEN'S HALL AT THE CLOSE OF THE SECOND SCHOOL YEAR.

Without intending to preach a sermon on the present occasion, I propose, nevertheless to take as a motto or text the familiar sentiment of Longfellow's "Psalm of Life—

'Learn to labor and to wait'

and to try to draw from it some few thoughts concerning the education of girls The subject and the manner of discussing it will, doubtless, be considered by many homely and common place And this for good reasons But familiar and common duties and principles are those most easily forgotten and neglected We are striving here, moreover, to educate girls for the duties and privileges of a homely and common place life, and we would prefer now to deal with the things that belong to that life rather than to stray away into the regions of speculations and theories It may possibly be thought by some that a discussion on labor hardly belongs to the subject of female education But it is surely a great mistake to suppose that any good thing can be obtained without labor, or that any portion of the human family is to be exempt from its obligations, or to be denied its reward and blessing I would notice here, then, two mistakes that prevail in the minds of many, both young and old, in regard to this matter The first is that an education can be obtained without labor and the second is that its main object is to enable those who have obtained it to 'get on in the world' without labor The pupil cannot, then, too early be assured of this most important necessity The skill and attainments of teachers are in no sense to be regarded as substitutes for diligent, patient labor on the part of the scholar They are indeed, mainly, to be the provocatives and the instructors of that labor to draw out and train the faculties of the mind so that they shall the more easily and the more efficiently perform their task Let me say to you then, my children that one of the first things you are to learn here is to 'learn to labor, that is to apply your own faculties earnestly and diligently in the pursuit of knowledge

The most accomplished and skilful teachers in the world cannot give you an education without this A library full of books will do no more than so many painted boards, toward storing your mind with knowledge unless you labor to possess yourselves of their contents You are to learn to labor and then you are to labor to learn We know that you cannot labor easily and successfully at first but you will learn to do so by effort and application The first step you make will give you place and ability for the second With the growth and development of your faculties through this labor, the work will grow easier and the relish and enjoyment greater I would not have you lose the full force and meaning of the word labor however I assure you that nothing but down right hard work, will answer the end here

Few things that any child or young person is set to do, with all the surrounding temptations, are more difficult than earnest, honest, continued study It requires far more resolution and force of character to marshal and apply the faculties of the mind to their appropriate labor than those of the body It is easier to scrub and wash to plow and spade, than it is to reach out and grasp and hold on with the power of the mind But this mental labor is more ennobling and elevating, and brings a richer and more enduring reward And while we ought not to disguise this to the young—that their education can only be secured through downright earnest hard work—we may be allowed to assure them that it is this only that gives value and enjoyment to rest and recreation It is hard work in the school room, that gives the best zest and relish to the play ground and it is the consciousness of well employed weeks and months in term time that makes vacation a pleasure and profit And you will remember also that it is the law of life that all things of high value and excellence are only obtained by earnest, persevering effort Descent is always easy Water runs of itself down the hill Weeds grow without cultivation Sin and vice need no apposite teachers, the human soul is quick and ready to follow their lead and willingly accepts all they offer

But knowledge, virtue, goodness, power to do good, and to get good, from all the offered opportunities of life come only through earnest and honest labor Therefore the wise man says "If thou erest after knowledge and liftest up thy voice for understanding if thou seek est her as for hid treasures then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord and find the knowledge of God"

But as your education ends not with your school days so does not this obligation to labor You are here to fit yourselves for a life of labor A man said to me some time since, 'I mean to give my boy a good education, so that he shall not have to work as I do, which was but to repeat the too prevalent sentiment, that the chief purpose of an education is to enable its possessor to live in some easy, idle, self indulgent way I trust that you will take no such low and unworthy view of the purposes of this life of the gifts of God and of the blessings He has placed within your reach Labor is the universal law of life the necessary preservative of virtue the only road to earthly happiness The idler is a disgrace and pest to society The educated idler the most disgraceful and pestiferous of all And idle women are no better than idle men, in some places indeed they are far worse You will find your education then, as something more than an ornament with which to grace the leisure hours of life You will esteem it a gift and acquirement for the increase and enlargement of your usefulness Rightly viewed you will acknowledge in it a higher obligation to a life of labor The ignorant and uncultured have some excuse for their idle and unprofitable life, but the educated men and women have none These laws and principles will apply to every condition and station of life that is before you No place can be so exalted as to remove this necessity, no lot or condition so humble as that educated labor will not prove a joy and blessing Put away, then the thought that your sex are either relieved from this necessity or denied its blessing While it is among savages only that woman is regarded as a slave and "beast of burden," so is it a condition but little if any superior to this—among Turks and Chinese—where she is an idle toy slighted and despised for her unprofitableness Women who have discharged aright the duties of the highest stations, have been women of the most toilsome and industrious lives I suppose few women of this age have led a life of less ease and idleness than Queen Victoria And we all know that such as Hannah More Caroline Fry, Florence Nightingale, Miss Sewell, Miss Yonge and Miss Dix, who have graced and honored their sex, and benefitted and blessed mankind, have been most industrious and laborious women And in ten thousand lower and less conspicuous stations it is woman's industry, care and patient toil that have alone lightened the trials and burdens of life, and brought peace and happiness to the household Do not take alarm at the thought of your thus being doomed to a dull round of servile labor, and a life of common toil and drudgery, without pleasure and enjoyment We believe in no such necessity as this We believe indeed, in no true enjoyment of life without labor that is, without the use and employment of the faculties which God has given us And we believe this is as true of women as of men No life is so tasteless and without enjoyment so little to be desired and so much to be feared, as the life of an idle woman While then we accept the well known sentiment of the poet—"Labor omnia vincit" we will remember the other also, "Labor ipse voluptas" But while we learn to labor, we are also to learn 'to wait" Teachers are to wait for the development of the capacity of the child, and its ability and willingness to study. The child itself must be counselled to repeated and continued effort, before the task can be accomplished, or light and pleasure come in its performance Here is large room for patient waiting' on the part of all In many cases the first desire for knowledge has to be begotten, an indolent and indifferent disposition has to be overcome a stiff, unyielding will to be made pliable habits of careful and methodical study to be acquired, and not a few things to be unlearned before any real substantial progress can be made One of the most frequent causes of slow progress, is the eagerness of the pupil to go fast, to run over the ground and to be satisfied with the mere name of having 'gone through' such and such studies These are the cases that try the teachers faithfulness If they are conscientious and honest they will hold back the pupil and compel this waiting till the foundations are laid, and there is some hope and possibility of real permanent advancement This they must do however, if they would do their duty to the child and to its parents, though oftentimes neither the one nor the others will appreciate the wisdom of such a course But it is better to lose the pupil than to be a party to the sham and dishonesty of a make believe education that has nothing but a thin showy surface But while pupils and teachers must wait so must parents The education of a child is a long, slow process, just as is the growth and strengthening of its mind and body. Almost all good and enduring things come slowly Haste and speed spoil many things that time would have matured and made lasting I rat plucked green is soon sour and acrid "Early ripe is also early rotten' A child's mind is immortal, and is worthy of patient, continued and costly culture Let no wise man look here for quick and early returns This is a field in which we cannot sow one day and the next put forth our hand to gather the harvest As the husbandman has long patience, waiting for the early and later rain to bring forth the fruits of the earth, so must we wait here for the visible and matured fruits of this higher work Long and patient labor must go on below the surface and out of sight as when one would lay the foundations of a grand and spacious temple, but when such a superstructure rises into view, it proclaims to all its solid and enduring character

Let me say a further word to the girls who now compose or are to compose this school in the future Keep this thought in your minds always Wait Remember that you are preparing for the duties and cares of life, for the responsibilities the influences and enjoyments of society but that you have not yet entered upon them Accept this situation fully and heartily Be assured that while you are school girls you should desire to be nothing else, that society has no claims upon you and that you cannot afford the gratuitous bestowal of your precious time even upon its most tempting demands Parents sometimes might do well to remember this also, and by a little consideration and firmness strengthen our hands in the effort to secure the greatest good to their daughters

When girls come to us, of whatever age or attainment, we desire to consider them for the time being school girls, and not members of society Whatever may have been their relations to society before when they enter our household, it is for the one paramount purpose of seeking an education, and to this purpose all other employments and purposes are supposed to yield

This will make the giving and receiving of visits, with its unavoidable dissipation of mind, a thing to be very sparingly indulged in, and moreover from many considerations to be mostly limited to members of the same family We would not impose one unnecessary restriction but it becomes more and more evident that free and unrestrained visiting, through the ever widening circle of a young girl's acquaintance would soon defeat the very purpose for which she comes to school Let these things wait, then, there will be time enough for them by and by Here are other and higher purposes, that can not be postponed without serious loss

Wait patiently, my children, through the whole limit of your girlhood Go not after womanhood Let it come to you Keep out of public view Cultivate retirement and modesty The duties and responsibilities of life will come soon enough When they come you will meet them I trust as true women should But Oh, be not so unwise as to throw away your girlhood. Rob not yourselves of this beautiful season which wisely spent will protect its bright light over all your future life Learn to wait, in all things to which you put your hand and for which you hope If you live well and wisely in the present the future will be brighter and better, and your waiting will be abundantly rewarded God in His love and goodness ever keeps the good wine of life "to the last If you will secure the wisdom that cometh from above to morrow will be not only as to-day but more abundant in joy and blessedness The world gives her best things first but that Divine wisdom that hath builded her house, hewn out her seven pillars mingled her wine and furnished her tables, reserves the best to the last You are here, but in the porch and vestibule of God's temple Do your duty here in faith and patience, and in due time you will be bidden to go up higher He who is our all hath gone into the heavens and there prepared a place for us We are still to do our work, by His grace and in His spirit and to wait His time for our release and reward—

No shall bondage as we willings say
The heavenward flame annoy
The Saviour has not pass away
And with him lies our joy

Over the richest tenderest glow
Sets round in autumnal sol—
But there's the faith no heart may know
The bliss when life is done

Such is Thy bequest dearest Lord
O give us grace to cast
Our lots with faith to trust Thy word,
And keep our best till last

The Daily Oregonian.

SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 1, 1871.

A "Departer's" Wisdom.

We are favored by the Herald with another deliverance on the "now departure." That paper just now is in an embarrassing situation. It gave its sanction to the new movement with quite too much precipitation, and its brethren of the Democratic press are now engaged in the work of whipping it back into the well-worn and long-approved ruts of Democracy. They will probably succeed. We all remember how they forced it out of its position last year on the eighth revolution of the Oregon platform. It can assume to be large, and can put on oracular airs; but its smaller and less pretentious contemporaries know well how to administer discipline in its case when occasion requires.

In a recent article, speaking of the California Democratic platform we said: "Those 'planks' known as the three several amendments to the Constitution are fully accepted, and an implied promise is given never to attempt annullment." To this the Herald responds: "No such promise has been, or will be given, by the Democracy." And that paper goes on to assert that its party only accepts the amendments as "accomplished facts," until they can be "modified or repealed in a legal and constitutional manner."

This interpretation of the California platform (which is identical with the Vallandigham platform in Ohio), would entitle the Herald to the chair of logic in Gulliver's Academy at Lagado. The second resolution of the California platform accepts the "three several amendments to the Constitution recently adopted, as a settlement in fact of all the issues of the war," and declares that "the same are no longer issues before the country now, since these amendments are a settlement of war issues, it follows that the Herald is seeking to annul them, would reverse the results of the war. Is that the position occupied by its party? Is that what its platform intends? Does the Herald suppose that the people of the Union would consent to the annulment of amendments which settle in fact all the issues of the war?" Are not these measures, which guarantee such a settlement, precisely what the country wants? Or does it want these harrassing and warbegetting questions reopened for another trial by battle?

When it is stated that these amendments to the Constitution are a settlement in fact of war questions and that the amendments are no longer issues before the country, what does the language mean but an implied promise that the Democratic party will never attempt to annul the amendments? Of course if they are no longer issues before the country it is because nobody calls them in question, but the moment they are called in question and their repeal is agitated, they become issues. The Democratic platform of California insists that they are not issues; hence it is implied that that party does not intend to attempt their abrogation. If the resolution does not mean this it means nothing. No doubt however, its authors are insincere in what they say. They promise fairly enough but intend to break their promise as soon as they get a chance to do so with success.

The First Telegraph Message.

The recent celebration in honor of Professor Morse, the author of the telegraph, afforded opportunity to speakers and essayists to give a history of the progress of magnetic telegraphy. In one of these elaborate essays, which appears in an Eastern publication, we are informed that the first telegraphic message ever transmitted was sent over the line between Washington and Baltimore on the 25th May, 1844. The question was sent from Baltimore "What is the news in Washington?" And the following answer was returned, "Van Buren stock is rising." The first press message was received by the Baltimore Patriot on the afternoon of the same day. It was in the following words: "One o'clock—There has just been made a motion in the House to go into Committee of the Whole on the Oregon question. Rejected—ayes 79 nays 56." So it appears that the first telegraphic dispatch ever transmitted to a newspaper had reference to our own Oregon—a fact worth preserving.

The line from Washington to Baltimore was opened for the regular transmission of messages on Monday May 26, 1844. On Tuesday June 2, 1846 the line was complised to Philadelphia and opened for business, and on the following morning reports by "magnetic telegraph" were published in the Philadelphia papers. It is said that there are now 150,848 miles of telegraph in the United States and 5,916 offices, in which no less than 10,000 persons are employed, and that in Europe, Asia, Africa Australia and America there are 300,000 miles of wire and 20,000 telegraphic stations. A large work to be accomplished in twenty-six years, especially as some Congressmen have stood Morse's invention in the same category with "Mesmerism" and "Millerism."

Precaution against Forest Fires.

As the dry season is near at hand, it is time to give a word of warning against careless setting of fires in the woods. Hunting and camping parties should take care to extinguish their fires before leaving them, or secure them so that they will not spread. Again a common cause of fires in fields and woods is the rising of paper or other materials easily ignited for gun wadding. If sportsmen would buy patent wads or use neither, many fires would be prevented. Almost every year our atmosphere is loaded with smoke from fires in the woods. How disagreeable, and even painful this is, many know from experience. Besides, the needless destruction of timber by these terrible fires entails great loss to the State, and it is a loss that may sometime be severely felt. A little precaution on the part of those who go into the woods and mountains in summer for the purpose of shooting game, camping in the open air, most of the fires which fill our atmosphere with smoke every summer could be prevented.

Measures are being taken to enforce the provisions of the National election law in San Francisco at the election soon to take place. Judge Sawyer of the United States Circuit Court has appointed Supervisors of election in the several Wards of the city. These Supervisors are divided equally between the political parties. The object of the law is simply to prevent injustice and fraud, and honest men have no reason to object to its enforcement.

We learn from the Albany Democrat that a young man at that place was terribly confused the other day when a young lady told him that he added hose he showed her were too small in the legs. He instantly rushed off and drank three glasses of Carothers' Arctic Soda water to quiet his nerves.

PACIFIC COAST DISPATCHES.

[SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE OREGONIAN.]

CALIFORNIA.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—The steamer Newbern, recently sold by the government, sails for the mouth of the Colorado river with a cargo for the Colorado Steam Navigation Company, tomorrow.

Gov. Haight will participate in the celebration of the 4th of July in San Francisco. The procession will, undoubtedly be the finest in every respect ever seen here on such an occasion. A gentleman, whose name is withheld, yesterday gave a check for five thousand dollars towards defraying the expenses, and it was paid on presentation.

Hale & Norcross levied an assessment of $10 a share, as predicted some days since, and Mahony one of $2.

The Mint will reopen for business to-morrow.

Mrs. Henry was found dead in her bed at her residence to-day.

The stock market has been very shaky, fluctuating violently to day. At the close the feeling was not strong and apprehensions of a break appear to be pretty general.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—Upon the reassembling of the First Congressional District Republican Convention this evening, Sears of San Francisco reported the declension of the Congressional nomination by Mayor Selby, and Dr. Brosson of Santa Clara nominated Hon. S. O. Houghton of Los Angeles, making a lengthy speech and claiming the position for the southern part of the State. The nomination was seconded by Hooper of Santa Clara. Hon. E. D. Wheeler nominated R. G. McClellan of San Francisco, A. J. Bryant nominated W. H. Sears of San Francisco. Houghton came forward and addressed the Convention, receiving immense applause.

Albert S. Pearlman sues Frank D. Cottle for $25,000 damages for being run over by defendant's team in May last.

Three steam wagons for heavy draft, same pattern as that recently exhibited here, is now being constructed to order for different parties at Ætna Foundry.

GRASS VALLEY, June 30.—People are excited over the water question, the supply for town being short and great danger of fire existing. Last night a meeting of citizens was held and the town trustees instructed to test the legality of the contract between the Water Company and the town. Meeting resolved to connect water pipes with Stow & Griffith's reservoir.

A miner named Grebble was yesterday afternoon struck by a cannon ball in the Eureka mine. A small cannon is used in the mine, and on this occasion the ball went through the quarts, bounded several times and struck Grebble, who was working in the stopes. Grebble's upper jaw was broken.

OREGON.

More than 3,000 cattle have been driven over the Cascade mountains from Linn county this year.

The steamship Sandrick entered Yaquina Bay a week or two ago; and, upon surveying, her officers found that the shallowest water in the channel, was 16 feet at low tide.

One hundred and twenty blasts will be let off simultaneously at Wallamet Falls on the Fourth. The holes are drilled twenty-six feet deep. A "concussion" may be expected.

As a party of men were driving a herd of 500 cattle over the Cascade mountain road from Linn county, a few days ago, a panther got among the herd at night and scattered them in every direction. Twenty-five or thirty head are lost.

THE TERRITORIES.

The rival steamers North Pacific and Olympia on Puget Sound, are racing. Contest for speed not yet decided.

Puget Sound papers complain that business is dull and money unusually scarce there. The Port Townsend Argus says that everything is in a state of uncertainty, and that the railroad excitement is becoming a curse to the country. A universal Micawberism, as that paper expresses it, has taken possession of the people.

There is a story going the rounds of the Washington Territory press that is not very flattering to the hospitality of Olympia. It appears when the Saranac anchored off the capital, Admiral Winslow and his wife took the Admiral's barge and went ashore. As it happened, the tide was in, and the boat was put along-side the wharf without difficulty. The couple stepped ashore, and walked about the place a few hours—no one knew them—and it coming on to rain, they went to the boat to go on board the Saranac, when, lo! the boat was found to be a mile from the water. There was no help for it, and Admiral W. and his lady went into a grocery store and sat down, (we have been told that the Admiral sat on a sack of flour) unnoticed and alone, for four mortal hours, until the tide flooded again and floated the barge. Admiral Winslow thinks if the terminus ever gets to Olympia it will be liable to stay there until the tide comes up at any rate.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

[From the British Colonist]

We understand that a sale of the Byanes Sound coal mine has been effected to an English company for $60,000. The stock was mostly held here.

Her Majesty's steam sloop-of-war Baron, 15 guns, 751 tons, and 100 H. P. arrived on Sunday night, the 18th inst., from Panama, having sailed from that port on the 20th of April, and come up under sail.

A Presbyterian Church will be erected on Lopez Island and another church of the same denomination will be erected on Orcas Island. Rev. Mr. T. J. Weeks, formerly of this city, and now chaplain to the American garrison on San Juan Island, will officiate in both churches on alternate Sabbaths.

Democratic journals are engaged in the rather funny occupation of reading Jeff. Davis out of their party or compelling him to take a back seat or subside into silence. They thus artlessly admit that he has been, and is, a member of their beautiful organization. Their trouble is to prevent his taking chief command in it. This is a rather amusing position for a party to be in that has just learned to accept the situation, and that appeals for bygones to be forgotten, or at least dismissed from discussion. It certainly is a little troublesome for them, just at this time when they are making all sorts of fine promises to have a man whose name embodies rebellion to assist them to come forward and declare that the war will yet live! and to do this, too, as a Democrat, is a little hard. It certainly is hard to operate to dash the beautiful and fervent hopes with which the other leaders of the party are seeking to charm the waiting people. But Davis, even in all their howls, is admitted to be a Democrat, only he must occupy a retired position in the party. Well, that is something to remember.

The Philadelphia Press notes it as a "gratifying fact that all discussions are banished from the Republican party now that they have broken out among the Democracy. Whatever differences of opinion exists among the intelligent and independent class of men that make up our organization, they are dissipated the moment they stimulate the common enemy. Everywhere Republican journals and Republican leaders suspected of hostility to the party are affirming their strong adhesion to its faith and their uncompromising hostility to the opposition.

The Cincinnati Commercial says there can be no doubt that the Democratic party has reached a crisis in its existence. If it accepts the amendments to the Constitution and pronounces a funeral oration over the doctrine of secession, it virtually surrenders its strongest antagonistic position to Republicanism. If it refuses to accept it, it is doomed to defeat. In the former case a victory would be barren of results; in the latter, defeat would not deprive it of honorable laurels for its consistency to principle.

The Universal Safeguard.

It is useless for State Legislatures to pass laws for the preservation of the public health, if the great law of self-preservation, which depends for its enforcement upon the will of the individual, is suffered to remain a dead letter.

There is scarcely an adult member of the community, of either sex, in the country, who has not seen the testimony in favor of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, furnished over their own signatures by persons of acknowledged eminence in science, literature, art, commerce, and every department of business and professional life. These witnesses have declared in the most explicit terms that the preparation is a safeguard against epidemics, a sovereign remedy for dyspepsia, a valuable anti-bilious medicine, a promotor of appetite, a genial and harmless stimulant, a good acclimating medicine, a strengthener of the nerves, a general invigorant, a protection against the deleterious effects of malaria and impure water, and that it imparts a degree of vigor and activity to the vital forces which is not communicated by any other of the tonics and stomachics in use. Under these circumstances the self preservative law of nature should teach every rational person who, either by reason of inherent debility or in consequence of exposure to unwholesome influences, is in peril of losing the greatest of all temporal blessings, health, the importance of using the Bitters as a defensive medicine. Dyspeptics who neglect to give it a trial are simply their own enemies. It is guaranteed to cure indigestion in all its forms, and the bilious will find nothing in the whole range of official and proprietary medicines which will afford them the same relief.

Literary Antiquities.

Mrs Ames has been examining and describing in the New York Independent some of the curious autographs in the possession of Senator Sumner. Among them is a veritable letter written by Catherine de Medicis to her son, Charles IX., and near by is a picture of this handsome, shameless woman, with a flattened head and a maternal face, and a stately form cased within a closely fitting robe, like the scales of a serpent. Here, also, is a letter from Mazarin, written from Avignon, 1684, and another from Richelieu to the Marquis of Breze, 1632. The greatest treasure, however, is an old-fashioned album, such as Algernon Sidney wrote the motto of Massachusetts in. That was the King of Denmark's. But Mr Sumner's was kept by a Neapolitan nobleman, Camillus Cordoyn, at Geneva, during the first half of the seventeenth century. It contains several hundred autographs of different nations, each with a motto or sentiment attached, of German Princes, French nobles, English Cavaliers and Roundheads. Then is the inscription of the first Lord Strafford, when a young man on his continental tour "Qui verit notus omnibus ignotus moribus," 1612." John Milton, on his way back from Italy twenty-seven years later wrote in the book the last lines of his own "Comus," which was published before he began his travels. Here it is in Washington, its freshness scarcely dimmed, as sensitive and delicate in characters as the day on which they were traced:

"If virtue feeble were Heaven itself would stoop to her."

Collum non animum mute dum trans mare curro

Joannes Milton Anglus, June 10, 1639.

Among Mr Sumner's books and manuscripts are some that once belonged to those masters of English prose, Dryden and Burke. In a little old worn schoolbook is a schoolboy's name, written on the title-page in a schoolboy's scrawl, and with a school-boy's fondness for flourish at the end. The name is "John Dryden," and his little old book, the one he used when at Westminster school, in addition to his Greek exercises, interlined with Latin translations of the hard words, in the boy's own hand. Among the manuscripts of Edmund Burke are letters written by his own hand, extending through several years.

Not Wrong but Inexpedient.

[From the Pittsburg Commercial]

Referring to a Washington dispatch that Mr Seward's and Atlanta speeches of Jeff Davis were acceptable to the Southern people, the Cincinnati Enquirer observes that it has "no doubt the next Southern paper that has occasion to speak favorably of Seward concerning them, will make a great exception "they are disappointed at, and most author rebuked." These harangues cannot be explained away in this manner. What it is true that a number of Republican journals "disapprove" of them, it is also true that they receive the indorsement of many others. But not one of those papers which have "rebuked" the author of these addresses, has had a single word to say against their wickedness. The "disapproval" is confined solely to the inopportuneness of the speaker. He is admonished to be more cautious hereafter, but to change his views. He is charged with, but cautioned not to be guilty of, treason. Don't show your hand now," is the cry of the dissentients, "but wait until we have the cards." Horace Greeley, whom no man will accuse of misrepresenting the South, reads from that section and from an interview with a great many, says of the Southern people that "Jefferson Davis's late speeches fairly express their average convictions and feelings," and thus report fully agrees with the undertone of nearly every journal of prominence, even when it is the most cautious policy. And while these speeches differ so very widely from the views of the standard-bearers of the new party, Col McCook, Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio, declared in his speech accepting the nomination, that the Fourteenth Amendment was full of clap-trap, and that the Fifteenth was not a legitimate result of the war. He opposed it from the beginning, and "and I have no regrets over that opposition. I was conscious then as I am conscious still." What the Amendments will be worth, construed according to his belief or their acceptance as only a practical question, is not of "the exigency of a political campaign." It is very easy to foretell what the Democratic candidate for Governor of Ohio said, in one of his latest speeches, the procuring of these Amendments was a fraud upon this people, and upon the whole people of the United States. Having been thus obtained, I hold that they ought to be repealed. There may be some Democrats who are not for their repeal, but the great body of our party is for it." In a similar strain the nominee for Lieutenant Governor of the same State, speaks. He says "If the Democratic party had control of Federal affairs with power to decide what construction shall be given to the Amendments and what legislation should be had under them, they would, practically, be much more than they are now." What is the vast difference between these utterances and those of Jeff Davis that the Democratic press should desire to brag the latter? Is mellifluous falsehood better than harshly spoken truth?

HENRY T. HELMBOLD'S

IMPROVED

ROSE WASH!

Cannot be surpassed as a FACE WASH, and will be found the only specific remedy in every species of CUTANEOUS AFFECTION. It speedily eradicates Pimples, Spots, Scorbutic Dryness, Inflammations of the Cutaneous Membrane etc., dispels REDNESS and INCIPIENT INFLAMMATION, HIVES, RASH, MOTH PATCHES, DRYNESS OF SCALP OR SKIN, FROST BITES, and all purposes for which SALVES or OINTMENTS are used, restores the skin to a state of purity and softness, and insures continued healthy action to the tissues of the vessels, on which depends the agreeable clearness and veracity of complexion so much sought and admired. But however valuable as a remedy for existing defects of the skin, H. T. Helmbold's Rose Wash has long sustained its principal claim to unbounded patronage, by possessing qualities which render it a TOILET APPENDAGE of the most superlative and essential character. Combining in an elegant formula those prominent requisites, SAFETY and EFFICACY—the invariable accompaniments of its use—as a Preservative and Refresher of the Complexion. It is an excellent Lotion for diseases of a Syphilitic nature, and as an Injection for diseases of the Urinary Organs, arising from habits of dissipation used in connection with the EXTRACTS BUCHU, SARSAPARILLA and CATAWBA GRAPE PILLS. In such diseases as recommended, cannot be surpassed.

General Recapitulation of Diseases and Cures.

For Kidney Affections—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu.

For Bladder Affections—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu.

For Gravel—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu.

For Dropsy—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu.

For Diseases of the Testicles—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu.

For Female Complaints—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu.

For Gonorrhœa, first stage—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu and inject with Helmbold's improved Rose Wash.

For Gonorrhœa, second and third stages—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu bathe the parts with Rose Wash, and after the inflammation subsides, inject with the Rose Wash.

For Gleet—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu and inject with Improved Rose Wash.

For Strictures—Use Helmbold's Extract Buchu and the Bougie. For dose, see bottle.

For Gonorrhœa and Gleets—Take one teaspoonful Extract Buchu three times a day, one hour before meals. Inject with small glass syringe, Helmbold's Improved Rose Wash—night and morning.

For Strictures or Painful Erections—Take Extract Buchu as above. Procure a bougie—be careful, and have it smooth and of small size—to the oppy sweet oil, that it may pass through the urethra with less trouble. This must be passed very gently, and by degrees, until it has entered the bladder, then let it remain a short time. The bougie should be so passed three or four times a day. This method is destitute of pain and danger, and will overcome the most obstinate Stricture, whenever the medicine is taken regularly, and the patient has sense to do as directed.

For Syphilis, when Syphilis alone exists.—Take two teaspoonsful, at night on retiring, and morning on arising, and apply the Rose Wash to the Ulcers, with a small sponge or piece of linen two or three times a day. In Swellings of the Groin, bathe the parts with cold water—then apply the Rose Wash.

For Gonorrhœa and Syphilis—During to promiscuous intercourse, these frequently exist and are contracted at the same time. Take Sarsaparilla, as above, and the Extract Buchu, three times a day, two hours after meals. Inject the Rose Wash, as directed, night and morning, and apply it also to the Ulcers.

The Sarsaparilla would be useful, taken in connection with the Buchu, in all three affections, although not in all cases necessary, but as in the diseases for which Buchu is used it is difficult to decide—what the Inoculation of bad humor may be, or how far it may go—as a precautionary measure it would be well to use Sarsaparilla a week, in this event the directions are the same as in Gonorrhœa and Syphilis.

For IMPURITIES OF THE BLOOD Scrofula, Eruptions, Beautifying the Complexion, etc.—Take two tea spoonfuls of the Sarsaparilla, night and morning. For CHILDREN, half the above quantity.

In all of the above diseases, the patient must bear in mind that the bowels must be kept open by H. T. HELMBOLD'S CATAWBA GRAPE PILLS.

For the Guidance of Patients.

Use no high seasoned, fat or greasy food. Acidulous and stimulating drinks, as well as the use of tobacco, should be avoided. Costiveness must be avoided in all of the above diseases. Use gentle exercise, and bathe the parts affected with cold water, freely and frequently. Take the medicine according to directions, and not only a safe but permanent cure is guaranteed, no matter how violent may be the case or of how long standing.

Permanent Cure for Gravel of Twelve Years' Standing—Stone Passed and to be Seen.

BURNSIDE, CONN., December 15 1869

DR. HELMBOLD—

DEAR SIR,—It is with much pleasure that I write you upon facts respecting myself. I do not know hardly how to express myself. I have been for the last ten or twelve years the greatest sufferer man could be and live, but more sometimes than others. The complaint was the "Kidneys and Bladder." I have been something from twelve to fifteen hours and was obliged to make water every minute but could not. Have consulted doctors both in Massachusetts and this State and taken pills. I may say by the quart, also I started ruptured since but found no relief from any, and, it seems the more months I was so that I could scarcely get about could not rest night or day. I would say to have been all up with me if I had not seen your advertisement in the "Berkshire Courier" headed "Kidneys." I read it through and thought I would try it. I purchased a bottle, but, mind that I had not much faith in it. Why should I, when I had been trying so many things and cost me so much? Well I began taking it, and before I had taken the first bottle, I felt bad. I finished it and got another. By the time I took half of the second bottle, I still got worse (apparently). When I walked it seemed as if my right kidney was falling from its place and I felt really bad. I felt so, before I had finished the second, that I made up my mind it was of no use for me, and more—and all this time the "Buchu" was doing its work, but I did not know it, so I went to Hartford on Saturday to one of the best physicians in the city. He said it was the neck of the bladder, and I should have to undergo an operation. He gave me medicine and I went home to lie down heartened. On Sunday I was unable to go to church. I had not taken any of his medicine but on my return continued using the "Buchu," and in the afternoon I had a desire to make water, but could not. About one hour after this I tried again, with the same result; but the next time I took the "Buchu" it was the same as turning a faucet and turning it off again. It was so for three times and the third time there was something came through the passage and struck against the side of the vessel. I examined it, and it is the size of a stone or gravel you ever saw, covered over with little pieces which collected together. It looks the color of a mud turtle, and is as hard as flint. So you see the "Buchu" was doing its work, although I was feeling so badly. I procured another bottle, thinking there might be some more behind, but since that has passed, which is four weeks ago last Sunday, I have been as well as ever I was in my life. I have the stone securely wrapped, and those who have seen it in this place are surprised. I cannot tell you all, but this is a true story of my case, and you are welcome to make use of my name as you think proper. I am pretty well known in Berkshire, also in Connecticut. This advertisement saved me. Why not publish more? The "Springfield Republican" is a wide spread paper. If any one wishes to see the stone, by even so I could write all day, but I think I have said enough this time, so I remain your ever well wisher,

A Case of Twenty Years' Standing.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., June 24, 1867

H. T. HELMBOLD, Druggist

DEAR SIR—I have been a sufferer for over twenty years with gravel, bladder and kidney affections during which time I have used various medicinal preparations, and been under the treatment of the most eminent physicians, experiencing but little relief.

Having seen your preparation extensively advertised, I consulted my family physician in regard to using your Extract Buchu.

I did this because I had used all kinds of advertised remedies and had found them worthless, as I some quite injurious, in fact, I despaired of ever getting well, and determined to use no remedies hereafter unless I knew of the ingredients. It was this that prompted me to use your remedy. As you advertised that it was composed of buchu cubebs and juniper berries, it occurred to me and my physician as an excellent combination, and, with his advice, after an examination of the article, and consulting again with the druggist I concluded to try it. I commenced to use it about eight months ago, at which time I was confined to my room.

From the first bottle I was astonished and gratified at the beneficial effect, and after using it three weeks was able to walk out. I felt much like writing to you a full statement of my case at the time, but thought my improvement might only be temporary and therefore concluded to defer and see if it was all right in a perfect cure, knowing that it would be of greater value to you and more satisfactory to me.

I am now able to report that a cure is effected after using the remedy for five months.

I have not used any now for three months, and I feel as well in all respects as I ever did.

Your Buchu being devoid of any unpleasant taste and odor, a nice tonic and invigorator of the system, I do not mean to be without it whenever occasion may require its use on such occasions.

H. T. HELMBOLD, Esq.

DEAR SIR—I have in my practice used (in the majority of cases where diseases of the urinary organs existed) Helmbold's Extract of Buchu and can conscientiously say that I have never known it to be used without the greatest beneficial results. I have consulted patients after partaking of it, and they invariably confirm my statement. I am satisfied that the preparation is an established fact commendingly proved by the practical test of long experience. Yours, respectfully,

DR. H. T. HELMBOLD

DEAR SIR—I have been suffering for a long time from Diabetes, and had been under treatment for the same by (3) three of the most eminent physicians of this place, viz: Drs. Hasbrook, Hall and Smith, without any apparent beneficial result. Having heard of your "Fluid Extract Buchu," I concluded to try it, although I had but little faith in its curative properties. I am happy to state that, after having taken four bottles of your "Buchu," I am entirely cured, and deem it but my duty to you and the community at large to inform you of the fact, and that I have been permanently cured by your medicine, after having been informed by the (3) three physicians above named that my disease was incurable.

Yours, truly, JOHN H. WYGANT

Cure of Bladder and Kidney Affections of Long Standing—Stone Passed and to be Seen.

WESTPORT, CONN., September 5, 1869

H. T. HELMBOLD, Esq.

DEAR SIR—I commence by taking your extract of Buchu about two weeks since for an affection of the bladder and kidneys. I have suffered by spells very much for a few days past. But yesterday relief came through the effect of your "Buchu." A stone passed from my bladder about the size of a pea, and I will feel perfectly well and entirely free from the pain that I have suffered with so hard. I attribute my cure to your medicine entirely, and would recommend all persons similarly affected to try it. I have great faith in its curative powers.

Yours, truly, THOMAS J. BENNETT.

THANKS TO MR. HELMBOLD.

GIRARD, PA., March 31, 1869

EDITOR COMMONWEALTH: I desire, as an unsolicited tribute to the merits of HELMBOLD'S BUCHU, and for the benefit of those similarly afflicted as myself, to say that, after consulting many eminent physicians and trying nearly all the best advertised remedies, in the vain hope of finding relief from aggravated kidney and bladder disease, from which I have suffered excessively for years, a good fortune finally suggested to me HELMBOLD'S BUCHU, which I commenced using with little faith and no apparent favorable result for about a month. At the expiration of that time, however, I thought I commenced to experience slight relief which encouraged me to persevere in its use, and now, at the expiration of four months, although I am an aged man, nearly seventy-eight years of age, and consequently medicines cannot be expected to favorably affect me as they otherwise would, I have found such unmistakable result and permanent benefit from Mr. Helmbold's valuable discovery that I feel I ought to publicly record the fact, as an acknowledgment to him, and a valuable suggestion to the public. Yours, respectfully,

DR. H. T. HELMBOLD—Two bottles only of the package of your valuable Buchu, presented to the Institution, have been used by the children, and with perfect success. In the case of our little Lieutenant A. J., his pillow no longer mortified, and he is free from the daily increasing anathemas of the chambermaid who has charge of the bedding. I feel that a knowledge of the result of our use of your Buchu with the children under our charge may save many a Superintendent and Matron of Boarding Schools and Asylums a great amount of annoyance, and many a poor child, suffering more from weakness than from habit, may be spared punishment that is (not knowing it as a weakness instead of a bad habit) most unjustly inflicted upon them. Thanking you on behalf of the children, and hoping others may be alike benefitted,

I am, respectfully yours,

H. T. HELMBOLD, Esq.

DEAR SIR—I take great pleasure in sending you a certificate in addition to the many you have received from suffering humanity. I can scarcely find language sufficiently strong to express my heartfelt gratification at the wonderful cure your Buchu has effected. For four years I have suffered beyond description. All my friends (with myself) came to the conclusion that my case was incurable. Accident placed your advertisement in my hand. I commenced taking your Buchu.

I followed the directions, and, to my utter astonishment, before I had taken seven bottles of your valuable medicine—I would give one hundred dollars a bottle if I could not get it at any other price—am entirely cured. I most earnestly recommend it to all those suffering from disease. I have told many persons to take your valuable medicine, and they are doing so with great success. I purchased one bottle some eight weeks since, which lasted one week, and from which she received great benefit, this induced me to purchase one half dozen bottles as I had tried many other remedies and my family physician, to no avail. DEAR SIR—On the 22d of August last I received severe internal and external injuries, occasioned by an accident on a Railroad car. On my arrival in New York I was attended by Dr. WILSON of East Fifty-fifth street, and another physician, whose name I do not now remember. After my wounds were dressed, I suffered for three (3) days quite acutely from internal injuries, which affected my kidneys. I can say that after taking but three doses of your EXTRACT BUCHU I felt greatly relieved. I used the balance of the bottle, and am happy to state that since that time I have experienced no further difficulty.

SUPPLEMENT.

White Hands.

This is not the story of a king, but of humble peasant girl; the scene is not ed in a camp, but in a village at a time hat Bonaparte's wars had not given to the mple name of Bernadotte (little Bernard) historic glory which still surrounds it.
e had and his wife had an only daughter,
they were so proud of her that she had coming into the world when they be-ame of her marriage. The man, la-with the greatest perseverance, sought place for her one of those attracwhich fascinate rich young bach-
the wife seconded his efforts so couragrubbing in the ground all day ring at night, constantly preparing
's outfit, that she fell sick and died, willing to call in the doctor, that save the cost of the remedies.

Father Hugh, left alone with his daughter,
only the more anxious to have a son-in-some sturdy laborer possessing a com-
, one who would insure both the pros-ity of his house and the happiness of his ired Bernadotte.

When she got to be eighteen years of age was no lack of suitors. Father Hugh ed to his avarice the reputation of a man in y circumstances, one who had cleverly ased his pennies to account by making short s at a rate of interest not sanctioned by e code; but all young men wishing to marry ot very good care not to reproach him with infraction of the statute; the sin would re-
with the father-in-law and the profits
the grandchildren; so they rubbed their nds and repeated the universal proverb:
'Tis an ill wind that blows nobody good."

Bernadotte, worthy of her sire in economy activity, trudged to town every fore-
on to sell her chickens, eggs and fruit.
frequently encountered young Micoutet, plowman, who would drive up his oxen to end of the furrow by the roadside and p them standing for a long time to bid the ung girl good morning, and chat with her out the rain, and the fine weather, and the ps, and the cows, and the growing corn,
d the beans that were about drying. Bernatte, no matter what might be her haste to to market, always had a few moments to re for her self-styled friend, and often after had left him to go back repeatedly to answer, mid words which he sent after her over the ulder as he could make her hear them, the last dge.

Arrived at the market-place, the first custo-
one whom Bernadotte usually found there the young baker, Casterez, who, under pretence of examining her eggs and fruit, ged the conversation a full hour, praising bright feathers of the chickens, their rkable plumpness, and bestowing a thou-
and compliments on the clever housekeeper,
who knew how to get them into such nice on. Passing from words to acts, he would bargain for the entire lot, appear perfectly satisfied with the price, and carry the off to his shop, where the fair merchant always found some refreshment and a couple of nice tarts garnished with sweetmeats.

Bernadotte, on returning home from market
lightened of her load, passed before the shop
the hairdresser Firmin, a young dandy as trimmed and smoothly shaved as the little Saint John in the procession of Fete Dieu.
M. Firmin had just completed his tour of s, as seated on a handsome sign in big ers, adorned with a pair of scissors and a
, after the fashion of a heraldic shield ged with a double device. "Hugh dotte," exclaimed the artistic barber,
have you any eggs to sell me to-day?" Bernadotte nodded affirmatively. She had been careful to conceal a dozen from this Asiatic buyer Casterez, purposely to have some left for M. Firmin. Prudence is the mother of certainty. Micoutet was undoubtedly very attentive, Casterez very devoted, but M. Firmin was no less agreeable, and nobody knew what might happen.

The eggs were accordingly handed to M.
Firmin, who found their freshness quite worthy of her who brought them. Far from attempting to abate the price, he added to the money he gave her a small flask of lavender water or a cake of scented soap. He wanted to know how Father Hugh was, and all about the cow whose excellent milk main-
the rosy hue of the milker's cheeks,
the sheep providing the wool with
to knit those pretty stockings so snug-little feet. M. Firmin, in his France had become very imper-
his pleasant son might have offended
the young music, had not her interests obliged her to dissimulate and to be somewhat tolerant. He asked her to bring him eggs the next day, butter every time she emptied her churn; and, notwithstanding his impertinence, a fault in young men which young girls often complain of to satisfy their con-sciences, Bernadotte found the hair-dresser
quite as agreeable as he was attentive.

Micoulet, the plowman, daily in the field,
no matter what might be the state of the weather, and at the earliest hour, because he could not sleep in his anxiety to see daylight and Bernadotte, became so worn out by this way of living, that he resolved to get back both his sleep and his usual tranquility. He betook himself to the house of the father of her who had robbed him of his repose, and cap in hand, with downcast eyes and a stammering voice, spoke to him a long time about Bernadotte, praising her vigorous arms, made for work, and the good health apparent in every form and feature, and finally demanded
her hand.

Father Hugh did not say yes, and still less no. He knew full well the value of those little words of few letters; like his coins, he would not let them go without certain guarantees of their being properly placed. He put off the young man to the following Sunday, and meanwhile communicated the proposal to his daughter.

"Micoutet is a very nice young man," said Bernadotte. "I stop and talk with him every morning on passing his farm. He has fine corn, good fields and an excellent vineyard.
Casterez, the baker, however, appears also to very good advantage; would it not be well"—

"Casterez, the baker!" replied Father Hugh in a reflective mood. "By our lady, there is always bread on a baker's counter!"

"And tarts on the dinner table," added Bernadotte.

"I will find out my child, what the baker means before deciding."

"His meaning, father, is plain enough.
He buys every morning all that I take to town
and without higgling about the price, please you. If I were to ask him double, he would not make the slightest objection."

"Without higgling about the price!" repeated Father Hugh, who did not do business after that fashion. "That young fellow is very much smitten! We will look into the matter, Bernadotte; and if his granary and his purse are as well stocked with flour and cash as his heart seems to be with love, we will try to make some arrangement."

Father Hugh strode off to town to see the baker, who, delighted with this proceeding,
showed himself deeply enamored.

"Which of the two!" exclaimed Father to himself. "The thing works well. We will set them to competing; goods in demand increase in value."

He returned home and, communicating the baker's sentiments to his daughter, promised her to decide quickly which of the two it would be best for her to marry.

"The baker is a very nice young man,"
added Bernardotte, the same as she had said of the plowman, Micoutet, "but there is another, the hair-dresser, Firmin. He buys something of me every day, and keeps me an hour talking about his tour through France,
the yarn my stockings are made of, and my good milch cow. He assures me that he has never seen any one more engaging than she whom he has the pleasure of looking at when he looks at me."

"The compliments of a barber!" interposed Father Hugh. "Everybody knows what they are worth. No matter, the affair progresses; competition among three makes the profit all the greater. We will see the hair-dresser, my dear, and find out what to expect from his admiration."

Hugh again returned to town, where he had an interview with M. Firmin; and as he knew that the larger the company of buyers
the more active the bidding, he invited each of the competitors to come to his house the following Sunday after mass.

"Humph!" he muttered to himself, as he canvassed the situation; "the plowman courts my daughter, but without neglecting his work or spending a farthing; the baker is doing the same thing, loitering about the market-place and spending his money to win
the saleswoman; the barber overwhelms Bernadotte with fulsome compliments and trifling presents. There is no hurry; things can be cleared up, and the characters of these gallants tested to solve my riddles."

When Sunday came Bernadotte made herself look as beautiful as the virgin queen of a May-day festival; she put on her best starched muslin cap, calico petticoat, red cotton handkerchief and morocco shoes, and waited the appearance of her three suitors, whom, on presenting themselves, the father
welcomed in these terms:

"You three wish to provide a husband for my daughter, and you all cherish the same object. As custom obliges her to reject two in the selection of one, she must proceed cautiously in this ever uncertain lottery.
Every scholar who goes to college passes five or six years in ascertaining whether he will wear the uniform of a soldier, the robe of a lawyer, or that of a doctor. A young girl may be excused if she asks eight days to decide what kind of a noose she will put around her neck. Come back here next Sunday, my friends, and in your best attire; I am a little particular in the interest of my dear Bernadotte, and I have always felt somewhat superstitious in the matter of tidiness. You must not be surprised if you see me give my daughter to the 'one who shall show me the whitest hands.'"

Father Hugh uttered these last words with marked emphasis.

Micoutet was almost ready to die with grief; working in the fields had made his hands drier than so much pumice-stone.
The baker and the barber, on the contrary,
always working in butter and soap, had hands
as soft as the satin folds of the duchess'
gown.

The poor rustic felt that he was set aside regarding the forthcoming struggle, as calculated for only city gallants. The latter animated by equally well-founded hopes, spent the week in getting their hands in proper condition, using unguents of the most mollifying character, and they became as fragrant and as white as possible, which stimulated their pride to the highest degree.

Micoutet had not even the courage to wash
his hands in the brook, so inferior did he regard himself to those town gentry. His grandfather Simon, perfectly familiar with world ever since he had stumped through it on his old crutches, and who was covertly regarding him through his white eyelashes, comprehended his embarrassment and came to his assistance.

"Micoutet, my boy," said he, handing him
a little gray bag covered with dust, "put that in your pocket, and keep your appointment at Father Hugh's. When the time comes to show your hands, plunge them into this bag,
and fill them with the unguent it contains."

"But, grandfather, my skin is as dark and coarse as the bark of an old tree. How can you—"

"Follow my advice, my boy. The wash-ball I gave you is so efficacious that the most obdurate spots will not resist its action. Its use is of very ancient date, and time has not diminished its virtue."

Micoutet took the soap-ball, and resorted to Bernadotte's house. The baker and the barber were not far behind.

Casterez first showed his fingers: they were whiter than the blossom of the dog-rose. The hair-dresser then displayed his, and they looked as fresh as a lily but just in bloom.
It now came Micoutet's turn. Firmin and Casterez began to laugh as he drew his huge hands from his pockets and held them forth,
when Father Hugh uttered a cry of admiration, for they were filled with bright and beautiful gold crowns.

"Aha! my boy, that is the real durable whiteness which I love. Bernadotte is yours, for you have courted her without quitting your field, and you know the whiteness the most appreciable in the hands of a son-in-law."

The two abashed and mute town candidates returned to their shops with their ears hanging lower than those of a hound after losing a hare. Bernadotte and Micoutet good-naturedly invited them to the wedding,
and they had wit enough to go, as townsmen scarcely ever neglect to enjoy what is good in the dwelling of a disdained peasant. The happy couple, happy as everybody is with as much money as good temper, labored throughout their lives to swell the contents of the soap-bag, the gift of the venerable grandfather.

A FRENCH MILITARY PRISON—WORSE THAN ANDERSONVILLE.—An officer whose brother happens to be charged this week with the military command of Satory, drew for me this morning a plan of the temporary prison on the plateau, and gave me some verbal ex-planations which I am now about to repeat. To the left of the road leading across the plateau from Versailles to Voisons, there is a quadrangle bounded by walls of about ten or eleven feet high. It is in this enclosure that the Nationals are confined. The sick and dy-ing have a shake down of straw in a shed forming one side of the square. The prison-ers, both men and women, are tied in gangs of nine together, and then fastened to posts standing from each other at regular distances, to which troop horses were formerly attached. In front and rear of each serried column of prisoners that stretches across the court, the walls are loop holed, and howitzers, loaded with case shot, pointed at the loop holes. The eastern side facing the shed is also ar-ranged in this manner. The gen d'armes, who exercise a direct surveillance over the in-mates, obtain ingress and egress by four doors near the corners, and circulate in narrow pas-sages, marked out with tightly drawn ropes. They have orders, in case of insubordination, to go out at once and give the signal to the artillerymen, who stand behind ready to fire, to throw case shot into the quadrangle. There is another open air prison of this kind in the Brest road, near St. Cyr. The officer from whom I derive this information tells me that nobody remains in this or the Satory cattle-pen for more than four days. There is no possibility for ablutions or change of raiment, and every group of nine must, from the way in which it is roped together, lie down, stand up, or sit as if it were a single person. Some-times the detention is shorter. The next stage of penal peregrination is to the convict depots at Cherbourg, Brest, Mont St. Michel, Belle Isle, Isle d'Air and Rochefort. Cayenne and New Caledonia are, doubtless, the final desti-nations of those who are directed on the above named sea ports.—Paris correspondent.

In his speech at New York, Earl de Grey called George Washington "one of the most illustrious of Englishmen."

Progress of the Democracy on their "New Departure."

[From the N. Y. Herald, June 15.]

The Democracy of Iowa have struck into the path of the "new departure." According to a Democratic contemporary of the Mon-sieur Mantilini school, who undertakes to cipher out "the demnition total," the enlight-ened Iowa Democrats, after floundering about for ten years in the Dismal Swamp of dead issues, "accept the situation." But why do they accept it? Because as the ingenuous Mantilini says, they wish "to accept their ut-terances to the bigotry, the ignorance and the narrow prejudice of men who have voted with the Republican party hitherto, and who have come sincerely to believe the falsehoods of Republican politicians and journals that Democrats are impolitic at heart rather than patriotic" on the back track to Buchanan. This new departure, then, is a mere gull trap. This is indeed a new rendering of the old play of "She Stoops to Conquer." But the movement is going ahead. The hint was given from Tammany Hall, the opening argu-ment was thrown out by Mr. John Quincy Adams, the ball was so in motion in Ohio by Mr. Vallandigham, and, "right about face," the Democracy have since rolled it through Pennsylvania to the Ohio river, and down that beautiful river to Kentucky, and thence up the mighty Mississippi to Iowa, and so, from State to State, they will keep "the ball a rolling" till the meeting of the grand Na-tional Democratic Sanhedrim of 1872.'

What then? Then, and before that day, we shall learn what this new departure really means. It means at present that, after fight-ing the issues settled by the war down to the late Connecticut election, the result in Con-necticut, from the "nigger balance of power," is no alternative to the astonished Democ-racy but the acceptance of the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth amendments, includ-ing negro emancipation, negro civil and po-litical equality, negro suffrage and all. In ac-cepting the situation, then, and "the consti-tution as it is," the Northern Democracy simply accept Uncle Tom "as a man and a brother." Under "the constitution as it was," in the good old Democratic days of Buchanan, and by a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, persons of African descent had "no rights which white men were bound to respect." And this was the constitution of the Democracy down to the late Connecticut election. Now, in accepting the constitution as amended by the Republicans, making free and equal all people, of all colors and all races, as citizens, the Northern Democracy, in a single bound, jump from 1861 to 1871, and from the Democratic platform of Jeff Davis and Buchanan to the Republican plat-form of "Old Ben Wade" and General Grant. Call you not this high ground and lofty tumbling?

Dey wheel about, and turn about, and do jes so;
And ebery time dey wheel about dey jump Jim Crow.

But does this advance the Democracy or does it set them back? That is the question. There is certainly no enthusiasm in the party organs over this new departure. What with their explanations and apologies and quib-bling excuses, and what with the growlings and grumblings of the unreconstructed, it is evident that this new medicine is a nauseous dose to the unterrified. To give up all that they have been fighting for since the Charles-ton Convention, and to sign all that the radi-cals have done, by means of fire and sword, since the election of Lincoln, in the liberation and elevation of "the d—d nigger," is in truth a bitter dose to your regular old line red-hot Democrats, dyed in the wool by the Dred Scott decision. Nor is it likely that they will for a year or two, even on this new de-parture, escape the consequences of a continu-ous fight on these dead issues on their line of march. Especially will continuous bush-whacking be the case from the Confederate crossroads of Kentucky to the alligator swamps of Florida and Louisiana. Jeff. Davis has developed the real fire of the old Democratic flint in the cotton States, and Stephens and Toombs speak for a host of Southern confederacy men when they say that your Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments are frauds and outrages committed upon a prostrate people by a radical despotism, and that these frauds will never be accepted by the Southern chivalry. This new Democratic departure, then, will strengthen General Grant in the South; and what it is going to do for the Democracy in the North we shall be-gin to discover in the coming fall elections.

Old Time Treatment of Prisoners.

The following from Dodsley's Annual Regis-ter shows that criminals a hundred years ago were subjected to more rigorous punishment than people of the present day will tolerate. But mankind has grown in humanity as well as in wisdom:

1773—September 13, London. This morn-ing Elizabeth Herring, who was convicted last Friday, at the old Bailey, of the wilful murder of her husband (who plied as a waterman at Wapping Stairs,) by stabbing him with a case knife in the throat, in a quarrel, while they were at a public house in King street, Wapping, was carried in a sledge drawn by four horses, from Newgate to Tyburn. She confessed that the wound she gave him was in passion, to which she was subject, but de-clared she had no intention of murdering him, and seemed to be entirely resigned to her un-happy fate.

The method of executing this unfortunate woman was as follows: She was placed on a stool something more than two feet high, and a chain being placed under her arms, the rope around her neck was made fast to two spikes, which, being driven through a post against which she stood, when her devotions were ended the stool was taken from under her, and she was soon strangled. When she had hung about fifteen minutes the rope was burn-ed, and she sunk till the chair supported her, forcing her hand up to a level with her face, and the flames being furious, she was soon consumed. The crowd was so immense a great thing it was a long time before the fag-gots could be placed for execution.

1774—October 1. This day a sergeant of the Third Regiment of Guards, who on Wednesday last was tried by a court martial for enlisting men for the Government service and afterward enticing them to enter into that of the French, and sentenced to be shot, was reprieved and ordered to receive nine hundred lashes on the parade, a punishment thought by many to be more terrible than death itself.

April 22. This day Thomas Ives, for coin-ing and counterfeiting the current silver coin, was drawn on a sledge to Tyburn, and after hanging for some time his body was opened and his bowels taken out and burnt.

December 21. Letters from Paris mention the execution of a young man and his accom-plice last week for the murder of his father, a stable keeper of the city, with which he gave him two mortal wounds in the body. His moth-er gave him ten guineas to effect his escape; but the murderers, however, were both taken, tried and sentenced to the wheel, etc. In the morning of their execution the son was mar-ried to Notre Dame, where, with a lighted torch in his hand, he made a public confes-sion of his crime to God, his King, and justice; after which he had his right hand severed at the wrist from his body; he was next con-ducted to the foot of a scaffold, where he be-held his accomplice on the wheel. Having ascended it he was likewise put on the rack, with his face upward, in which excruciating torture he continued near six hours, uttering the most horrid imprecations before he ex-pired.

1775—October 10. Johannes Baptista Pale, a native of Genoa, was executed in Lis-bon for having plotted against the life of the Marquis of Pombal. He was drawn in quar-ters by four horses, after having his hands dragged off, and afterward burned to ashes. It is reported that though he suffered the or-dinary and extraordinary torture from the be-ginning to his dying moment, not so much a sigh escaped from him.

November 15. Nine old women were burned at Kalish, in Poland, charged with having bewitched and rendered unfruitful the land belonging to a gentleman in that Pal-atinate.

The President's Position.

[From the New York Times.]

It is evident to any one acquainted with the current of sentiment that it is settling rapidly and steadily towards Gen. Grant re-nomination. In the absence of any spec-ial occasion for the expression of public opin-ion—such as would arise, for instance, from the near approach of the National Conven-tions, or even from a warm contest over State nominations—there are, nevertheless, many indications of popular feeling. The most significant and defined of these are the ex-pressions brought out by the absurd denun-ciation made by the Herald over Gen. Sher-man; by the recent journey of Mr. Horace Greeley, and the purely political receptions tendered him on his return; and by the speeches of Davis, and the letters of Toombs and Stephens in the South, and the "new departure" of the Democrats in the North-west. These incidents have awaked public attention to national affairs, which previously were flowing with unnoticed monot-ony, and have suggested to the people the question of the issues to arise in the next Presidential campaign, and the way in which they shall be met.

It is plain those issues will embrace on the one hand the relations [illegible] the results of the war, [illegible] the regular administration to the [illegible] ment, and especially of the national [illegible] cets of the country. On both these classes of issues Gen. Grant represents the sound, firm sense of the people, and the people are continually growing in their appreciation of this fact. He is not a doctrinaire; he has not embraced any sharply defined theory of the legal effects of the war, and insisted on Con-gress yielding to it; he has wedded his [illegible] to no project that arouses the pride of [illegible] tency, the obstinacy of vanity. He [illegible] the action of the people's repres[illegible] fairly embodying what the natio[illegible] and devoted the utmost powers of [illegible] tive to carry that action into effe[illegible] other hand, in the administration [illegible] ernment in its ordinary functio[illegible] shown great good sense, patience a[illegible] He has unquestionably made mist[illegible] he has shown an unexpected in[illegible] dented capacity for retracting an[illegible] them. The errors into which he [illegible] have been the occasion for develo[illegible] of the most striking qualities in [illegible] The people have shown that his [illegible] are made in sincerity, and that w[illegible] withdrawn them there is an end o[illegible] ter. The people feel that Presiden[illegible] the more, not the less, likely to go [illegible] the future for having gone a little a[illegible] the past.

But the feeling of satisfaction and a[illegible] based on the positive and solid elem[illegible] President Grant's Administration ou[illegible] every other sentiment in the public mind Wherever one comes in contact with the [illegible] honest expression of the [illegible] these points, the result is uniform, [illegible] in full that what Grant has done is of infinitely more significance than what he has not done, or that what anybody else may promise to do. The mass of the people, reasoning by the most obvious facts, ground their confidence in the President on the reduction of the public burdens, the taxes lessened while the debt is being paid, the revenue economically collected, the steady progress toward the re-moval of all governmental interference with the course of business, and, in addition, the complete wiping out of existence of our differ-ence with England—the only serious threat to permanent peace and prosperity. These can-not be mystified nor distorted. They are mile-stones by which the advance of the coun-try since the war is easily reckoned.

We do not deny the embarrassments and evils arising from a second term; nor are the people at large insensible to them. It is too evident a fact for any one to ignore that, even if a President himself be perfectly disinter-ested and loyal to his immediate duty, our wretched civil service system makes him the centre of a thousand hopes and ambitions, all of them strong, and some of them corrupt, urging the recipients of his patronage to in-volve him in their own schemes. But these evils arise from a possibility of a second term, and are not to be avoided by casting aside a good President. In fact, they can only be baffled and remedied by the re-election of a President whose fitness is sufficiently proven. It is always in the power of such a President, at the beginning of a second term, to con-tinue the public service with more steadi-ness, and at the same time more progress to-ward reform, than could possibly be done by a new man, exposed to the intrigues and de-ceptions of all the old, and a horde of new parties in interest. The people believe now that Gen. Grant is an abler, wiser, safer man, and that their grounds of confidence in him are stronger than when first elected, and it will require something not now to be fore-seen, to shake that conviction, and to trans-fer that confidence to any other man, Repub-lican or Democrat.

A Counterfeiter Neatly Stampeded.

[From the Boston Commercial Bulletin.]

There is among that coterie of literary men, wits and writers, that make up the editorial staff of the Harpers' publications, a certain tall, good looking literateur who has a hand in the Editor's Drawer of the Monthly, named Major Constable.

Now, at about 10 o'clock lunch time in New York city—it often chances that not only edi-tors but frequently the principals of the great publishing house repair to the "Frenchmen's" a noted chop house, where all go to get a smack, and you may see the good natured blue eye of Joe Brooklyn, the roguish one of John the financier, meet the calm and quiet Joe Abner, and others more or less noted, at the different tables.

It was one of these "mootings," as two of the brothers stood at the counter about to pay for their lunch, and discussing a military point of which neither had practical knowl-edge, that a somewhat anxious individual threw down a greenback of large denomina-tion before the cashier, with—

"Dollar'n a quarter out."

"now," said Joe Brooklyn, continuing his argument, "we can prove the case, for there is an officer here" and, turning toward the table where the tall member of the corps edi-torial sat, he explained: "Constable, step here; this is a case for you!" The Major rose slowly to full height and took but a single step toward the counter, when the stranger, who was waiting for his change, made a spring, nearly upsetting the two brothers, bolted for the door out of which he lashed like a deer, leaving his greenback behind un-changed, and was out of sight in a moment.

"What the deuce is the matter with thee, Jack?" said his brother, as the financier re-covered from the fierce jostle of the man's rapid exit. "The matter is not with thee, Jack, but with the bill, I suspect," said the financier, picking up the fifty spot which the flying customer had left on the counter and to change which the Frenchman had been la-boriously extracting forty-eight and three-quarters with sticky hands from his money drawer.

And so it proved; the fifty was a counter-feit. A guilty conscience needs no accuser, and the chance expressions of "officer" and "constable step here" were too much for the "shover of the queer," who, supposing him-self discovered, incontinently left as above described.

An Old Drinking Song.

[There are few quainter bits of old English than the following drinking song, long out of print and only found in some occasional black-letter volumes. It seems to have been the especial property of a club of topers in "Little Britain," London. Its origin dates back at least three centuries. The careful reader will see a strong under-tow of temperance lecture lying beneath the rollicking surface fun.]

I cannot eate but lytle meate,
My stomacke is not good,
But sure I thinke that I can drinke
With him that wears a hood.
Though I go bare take ye no care,
I nothing am a colde,
I stuff my skyn so full within,
Of jolly good ale and olde.

CHORUS.

Backe and syde go bare, go bare,
Both foote and hand go colde,
But belly, God send thee good ale ynoughe,
Whether it be new or olde

I love no rost, but a nut-brown toste,
And a crab laid in the fyre;
A lytle bread shall do me stede,
Much bread I not desyre,
No frost nor snowe nor winde I trowe,
Can hurte me if I wolde,
I am so wrapt and throwly lapt
Of jolly good ale and olde.

Backe and syde go bare, &c.

And Tyb, my wife, that as her lyfe,
Loveth well good ale to seeke,
Full oft drinked shee, tyll ye may see,
The teares ran downe her cheeke,
Then doth she trolle to me the bowle,
Even as a maunt worme sholde,
And saythe shee, harte, I tooke my parte
Of this jolly good ale and olde.

Backe and syde go bare, &c

Now let them drynke tyll they nod and winke,
Even as good fellowes sholde do,
They shall not mysse to have the blisse
Good ale doth bynge men to
And all poore soules that have scowered bowles,
Or have them lustily trolde,
God save the lyves of them and their wyves
Whether they be yonge or olde.

Backe and syde go bare, &c.

The Perils of Fortune Telling.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.]

The first question was put in a slow, dismal, cabalistic way, looking the pursuer of knowledge under difficulties square in the face: "Namkypotwapsacatacolldumbikikel-lacatajamdaulikiki?" Trembling with every nerve, the subject of these investigations replied, "that he thought, under the circumstances he, she, or it, might, mutatis mutandis, Erin Go Brangh, for instance—that I have a doubt in the mind, which notwithstanding the most proximate propinquity and remotest probability could rotate." After a slight pause No 2 said she really thought so herself, looking steadily into the deep drawn lines in the palm she said: "Thou art 35 years old." "I art not—by several," said the querist, truth. "Thou dost not understand me," said she, with an embarrassed air. "Dost thou suppose the sublime science of palmistry deals with sordid clay? Mentality—spirituality—I mean the mental and spiritual nature as distinguished from the physical, thou art 35 no more nor less," she added, shaking up the lines of the human flesh, (like Gen. Butler at Fort Fisher and casting her eyes at the wilting and pickled human hand, as the stars would dispute such authority? "I am single, art thou not?" Too timid to reply directly in the negative, the fortune-seeker only suggested that he would refer to the private affairs of his wife and innocent babes when he got home that night. "Wife and babes, ha? Crosses!" the revealer of secrets with a shiver. "Wife and babes, ha? Knowest thou not I refer to the spiritual—the mental? Yes young man, thy heart is unwedded; thy mentality is unmarried. It is only thy corporeal, or natural that was five years ago—no, only three, six years ago wedded to some [illegible] time." "But I have only been so [illegible]," said he. "Rogue, rogue," stormed the thrice caught revealer of hidden things, "art now dost thou say babes?" "Twins," ejaculated he. She laid her hands across her brow and pondered. She turned her hand and was completely nonplussed. She asked to be excused from any further insight into the future that day. The elements [illegible] who feared, by some unusual [illegible]. The magnetism of the air was charged out of tune and harsh." She hoped for a more favorable time to call again when electricity and the fates were in sublimer rapport.

A Peculiar Custom Among Women Gamblers in Mexico.—Some time last night, with flushed face and tumbling hair, was a young daughter bending over and whispering to her. She is risking from forty to one hundred francs at each turn of the wheel. Life and death are pictured in her face. There is a beautiful young woman with a great pile of gold before her. She risks from one hundred to five hundred francs at a time and is as cool and unconcerned as if she was playing whist. She has been a large winner. After watching the game for hours, I became convinced that it was as dangerous to win as to lose. After winning,—it was so easy one was sure to keep on until they lost all. If one lost they would play on to gain back.

We saw one poor fellow, who had a large amount of gold lose every dollar of it, while there were, no doubt, many others, equally unfortunate. A lady whom we had met in Geneva happened to drop into our car. She was going to see the sights. She said that every one was going to Monaco tried their luck and did not. On returning that night she said she had lost sixty francs, remarking, "One must pay for their experience." I was almost tempted to repeat to her the proverb. Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other." I presume that during that day and evening $100,000 changed hands, and the bankers came out many thousands the gainers.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln's Son.—All who can imagine the temptations to arrogance, idleness and superficiality which the son of a very celebrated man must encounter as an incident of his heritage, will appreciate the compliment implied in the following description of Robert T. Lincoln, which occurs in a sketch just published on the "Chicago Bar:" "He is but little more than twenty-five years of age, and has already taken a position as an able, an excellent manager, possessed of good ability, quiet, shrewd, unostentatious, and with a thorough devotion to the profession of law. He is the more entitled to credit from the fact that he has steadily resisted all attempts to induce him to accept some official position while his father was President, or to mix up in politics since; and that he has applied himself to his legal studies precisely as if he were the son of the least influential of men, and has pursued them under many painful and most discouraging circumstances. It is proved that he has a thousand and one qualities; and there can be no doubt that with age he will attain a distinguished eminence as a member of the legal profession." The tender and reverent love which all true Americans have for Abraham Lincoln will give peculiar satisfaction to the reading of such good words about his eldest son.—Golden Age.

A Touching Incident.—Among the many touching incidents of the Pittston coal mine calamity, none are so full of interest as the conduct and mournful fate of Martin Crahan, a boy who was among those found dead in the chambers. He had only been promoted to the position of driver on Friday, and he and another boy were near the bottom of the shaft as the last carriage was about to ascend. The little fellow at once thought of the men away back in the chambers, who had not heard of the disaster, and asked his comrade if he would come back with him and give the alarm. He would not go, but stepped on the cage and arrived at the top in safety. Young Crahan started back to inform the men, but he never returned to the shaft. The cage gone. He remained [illegible] the shaft through all the [illegible] men had retired and [illegible], he went back and [illegible] most piteous manner for admission. The men however, would not risk the life of all the rest and left him to his fate. He went to the stable and lay down beside his mule after having written on a board [illegible] father, mother and a little [illegible] named after him, and in this position he was found dead, the mule having rolled partly over him and crushed his breast.

Stock Books Open.

THE UNDERSIGNED HAVING BEEN APPOINTED by the Incorporators of the Portland, Dalles and Salt Lake Railroad Company to open books and receive subscriptions to the capital stock of said company, does hereby declare such books now open for subscription at his office in this city.
This is done now, because it was believed that the citizens of Oregon, and especially of Portland and thence along the line of the proposed road would desire to take sufficient stock, at least to be an endorsement of the enterprise, and enable them to exert an influence in its management.
A certain proportion of the Directors are required to be residents of the State, who must first become stockholders before Directors. While the invitation to subscribe thereto is cordial, I will visit Eastern Oregon and Idaho during the month of July to give the citizens there an opportunity of engaging with us to the good cause.
